

Colorado ARTISTS

People flock to Colorful Colorado year-round to hike, bike, camp, ski, and fish. Many also come to view the abundant wildlife, to explore the lakes and rivers, or to relax in a mountain retreat. In addition to its natural beauty and mountain charm, however, Colorado boasts another alluring feature: The state is home to a vibrant community of painters and sculptors. In the following pages, we spotlight a diverse sampling of fine artists from the Centennial State who portray a wide range of subject matter. As you search for new pieces for your collection, let this section be a guide.

Brooks Powell

Our world is made of energy and light. Although I paint representationally, I am seeking to catch the subtleties and vibration of light, the essence of which I long to capture. The Rocky Mountains and sometimes people are my subject matter. Along with a BFA, I have had the privilege of workshops with master painters of our time. ▲ Secrets of the Shadows, oil, 11 x 14.

Mitch Caster

Mitch Caster is a Colorado artist who loves the ocean! (And of course subjects closer to home, including landscapes, people, and much more!) He is a five-time Emmy award-winning courtroom artist, who has sketched some of the nation's most notorious trials. After hearing all that negativity, he now focuses his art on capturing the beauty of our world. Representation: Marta Stafford Fine Art; Castle Gallery Fine Art; Santa Fe Art Collector; Principle Gallery. ▲ Snowy Egret, Oil on Linen, 18 x 24.

► Approaching Twilight, Oil on Linen, 24 x 12.
