

Latest News and Updates

August, 2021

Happy August! It's hard to believe that September is around the corner, which means Art on the Green, taking place Sept. 11-12 in Greenwood Village.

I don't take part in art fairs very often, but last year, as a result of my work with the Healing Arts program at Parker Adventist Hospital, I was invited to the first-ever Art on the Green and decided to do it - and was glad I did. Some people told me that the event was the first "normal" thing they'd done since the pandemic started - even with masks, hand sanitizer, social distancing and timed-entries. I was grateful to hear that I could help offer some sense of normalcy, and was very grateful to everyone who came to the event.

Here we are a year later, and the event will again be a safely curated one. And this year it will expand to two days. I hope you'll consider attending! You'll find up to 100 artist booths, with paintings, drawings, print-making, fiber arts, and ceramics for sale to fit every budget. You can walk around, stop by any booth to talk with the artists, ask questions, and learn about their craft and process. I'll be there with oil paintings and charcoal, pencil, ink and pastel drawings. It's free to attend. You can check out an article from The Villager about last year's fair - which included me as a featured artist - here. And you can get more details about this year's event below.

Also, on the same weekend, my painting, "Adobe Work," will be part of the "Best of America" show, which opens in Missoula, Montana.

Best regards,
Mitch
