Happy April!

Spring is here and off to a busy start! The Colorado Governor's Art Show and Sale will open this month, and I'll be exhibiting four paintings there. I'll also have two pastels in the Mile High International Pastel Exhibition, opening April 9.

In honor of these Colorado events - as well as a recent presentation I made to Professor Tony Ortega's class on "The Art of the Southwest" at Regis University - this month's Gallery Spotlight is on Spirits in the Wind Art Gallery, in Golden, Colorado.

The gallery was founded in the 1990s with a mission to exhibit highly skilled western artists to Colorado. In 2020, Gina Armstrong - a Denver native, art collector and entrepreneur -- took the reins. In collaboration with director Dawn Kloba, the gallery looks to spotlight artists who "imbue timeless art techniques and local imagery to reflect the West's beauty and history," says Gina.

Spirits in the Wind presents art from an array of artists who are creating unique work in a variety of mediums. The gallery provides a platform for visionary western art in Golden's iconic downtown. Take a look below at some of my pieces you'll find in the gallery.

Enjoy!
